"Sunday services look quite different, with people sitting six feet apart and wearing masks. As a speaker in a worship setting, I must say it feels very odd to speak to a group and not see facial responses. With an audience of masks, the speaker is unaware of smiles or grimaces. It can come across as though no one is really paying attention.

People are generally happy to get together even without the privilege of personal touch. However, I would suggest that if seated in a pew it would be good to show some emotion somehow. Raising or clapping hands would be quite appropriate at the right time in the service. I highly suggest nodding instead of merely having a blank forward look. Help your pastor know that you are paying attention. After the service, take time and speak (six feet apart, of course) to your presenter/pastor to let them know you heard the message".

CBMin.org/hopefulgifts.ca Gifts that Change Lives -

The global pandemic has made life uniquely challenging for us all, but more so for those who already faced being marginalized by poverty.

CBM's Hopeful Gifts for Change gives you the opportunity to give gifts to those in need. Nazario and Dorcas are only two of many who have benefitted from Canadian Baptists' generosity.

In Rwanda... CBM's literacy program gives access to skills needed for more opportunities. Dorcas, one of the participants, shared that when she was illiterate, she felt ashamed and sad. She relied on her husband and children to read and write. Through the program, she gained dignity and now enjoys a newfound freedom.

In Bolivia Nazario is a recently-widowed father living in a remote area where the Chagas disease is rampant. Poverty is widespread, many cannot afford to protect their homes against the disease-spreading bugs (*remember our CCC children's Chagas Project this past year?). CBM and local partners provide assistance to Nazario and many others through prevention, education and treatment programs. Crucial farming provisions allow people like Nazario to grow and produce crops for a source of income, while feeding their family. This Christmas season, you can help others like Nazario and Dorcas by giving gifts that bring hope and transformation to those in the margins.
